

We, the workers of VIO.ME.in struggle, liberated from the bosses, we keep on resisting, despite the pressure and the legal maneuvers that take place behind our backs. We insist on being workers, on remaining in the factory, with our central demand: “the factories, as well as all the social wealth, should be managed by those who produce”.

We stay strong on our path through our proposals and our actions, committed to the decisions we have collectively made, along with the rest of society, which accompanies our struggle. Our banner is our absolute freedom, as we are not waiting for the better days they promised us; instead we have decided to create those better days ourselves. Not only for ourselves, but also as a proposal to the society that is affected by the crisis.

We have decided not to give up the factory, despite the attacks to our proposal to society, but also to political parties or the government.

We have done all we could to find a definitive solution for the operation of the factory. We have offered our proposals to all interested parties, but there was no response or counterproposal. Thus, whatever happens from now on, the responsibility lies with the authorities and with our “democratic” representatives.

We keep on the struggle for our right to work, for our right to dignity!

The products manufactured by the workers of this factory carry a message: The message of a radically different way of life, from the way we organize production to our relationship with the environment.

For this reason, we choose to produce exclusively natural detergents, convinced, along with many other people, that in order to clean our homes and our workplaces we do not need to pose a burden to the environment, we do not need to compromise our health or that of our children.

Our grandmothers and their grandmothers had the knowledge of how to combine different ingredients found in their kitchen to create effective cleaners. Against the advertising campaigns of the big industries, which try to convince us that the most important aspect of the cleaning products is the duration of the wildrose fragrance, we reply that the most important thing is to not suffer from skin or respiratory disease, to not have to rinse a dish for 10 minutes wasting litres of precious water, to not damage the washing machine in order to clean your clothes and, most importantly, to not have to choose between food and hygiene, spending a small fortune just to buy detergents.

Above all, the message our products carry is that the workers and the unemployed have to take our lives in our own hands, to fight with determination against the barbarism of modern reality, to free ourselves from centuries of exploitation and oppression. At VIOME we only have contempt for heavy fragrances, when they are used to cover the stench of labour exploitation and misery. Instead, we chose solidarity, workers' control of the production, self-management through the workers' assembly and direct democracy in decision making, pointing towards a path that is difficult but inevitable at the same time.

The time is now, the place is here and the struggle makes the gear spin, transforming our lives.
